

ABSTRACT

A system and method in accordance with the present invention determines optimal specification limits for product by utilizing the characterization values for parameters of a plurality of known good parts. The known good parts are proportioned based upon a desired yield. The proportioned known good parts are partitioned into to provide a subset. The parameters of the partitioned subset of known good parts are utilized to determine the specification limits of the product.